

CHISWELL-BUCKTROUT HOUSE

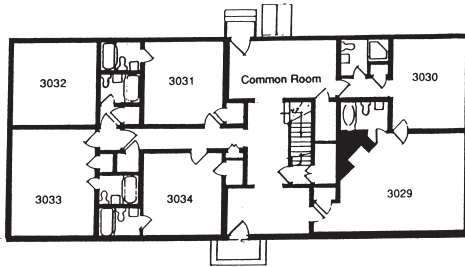

The Chiswell-Bucktrout House is located on East Francis Street. It has nine rooms on two floors. Two prominent citizens, Col. John Chiswell and Benjamin Bucktrout owned the house.

Chiswell had the house built in a popular English style. Known for his hot-headed temper, Chiswell was arrested for murder. His well-connected friends arranged for him to be freed on bail, but he was found dead before his trial. Bucktrout was a cabinetmaker from London who purchased the house a few years after Chiswell's death.

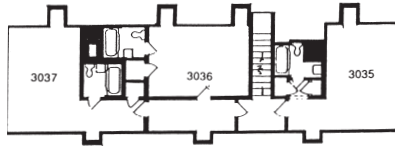

The first floor has six rooms. There are three queen canopy bedrooms (one has a fireplace), two rooms with twin beds, and one room with a double canopy bed. There are two sets of rooms that can be connected. All rooms have private, full baths.

The second floor has three rooms. There are two queen canopy bedrooms and one twin bedroom. The twin bedroom can be connected to one of the queen rooms. All rooms have private, full baths.

This tavern is an excellent choice for large family reunions and gatherings.
